A Look at Signs and Symptoms of Lupus

When communicating to friends and family about lupus, it might be difficult to describe exactly what you're going through. Sometimes an image that you can point to and say that you have that symptom will help others to try to relate to what it might be like. It will also show them that if an image was created, there are others who have the exact same symptoms, which can help them to understand that it's the symptoms instead of the person that interfere with daily life. You can also make your own very easily just to give you a starting point to discuss each of your symptoms in detail.
